What is a Research Roadmap?

All roadmaps have a structure with main components as in the following figure.

All Roadmaps are based on the consensus opinion of experts in the respective area and of representative of stakeholders worldwide, both within and outside of the CIB community. These experts' and stakeholders' opinions have been sought after via surveys, workshops that were organised in conjunction with international conferences and designated roadmap consultation webinars.

Research Roadmap Development projects

The Roadmap section in the CIB website also gives access to 11 presentations on further ongoing roadmap development projects by CIB Commissions and Theme Groups that will lead to additional publications by the end of 2016 or in the course of 2017.

Whenever a new roadmap publication becomes available, it will be introduced via a CIB News article and it will be included in and be downloadable from this website section.
